Capti: Fabula Menippeo-Hoffmanniana Americana

By Stephani Berard

AUTHORHOUSE, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: Latvian,English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Plot Summary: REVISED EDITION - In Capti, Stephen Berard weaves a multicultural, particolored, sometimes surreal and often hilarious tapestry of satire, magic realism, myth, science, and poetry that causes the reader to pinch himself, asking if he can actually be reading something like this in Latin. The central character is a highly functional autistic Seattle ballet dancer, Woody Fava, who speaks in verse and who uses chromoptic therapy in the form of colored eyeglasses to help himself make sense of his world. In search of the Goddess, whom he is sure has recently moved into a condo somewhere in Seattle, Woody quits his ballet job, quickly impoverishes himself, and has a series of disturbing misadventures, until finally disappearing only to reemerge in Los Angeles at the center of a bizarre murder mystery. But this is only part of the story since Woody's life is reflected and refracted into a thousand other tales yes, hints of Scheherazade! lived out in other times and other contexts. Latine Libri epitome: In pictura textili sua, fabula hac Capti titulo inscripta, Stephanus Berard...
