Its last return was in 1835; and judging by the records of that time, it may be expected to be a fairly bright comet in May, 1910. But it will be by no means one of the brightest comets: it will probably not compare, for instance, with the great comet of 1858, which some of us remember, and which is associated with a famous vintage. The fame of Halley s comet is due to two causes almost independent of its brightness: to its long history (which has now been carried back definitely, by the admirable work of Messrs. Cowell and Crommelin of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, to B. C. 240), and to the circumstances under which it became associated with the name of...
