Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Casuals of the Sea: The Voyage of a Soul About twenty years ago, late in January, snow was falling over North London. It fell for some hours continuously; without intermission the Evening Star said, whose sub-editor lived in the neighbourhood; and the said sub-editor sent his nephew, who was learning the business, to the British Museum, to look up heavy snowfalls from 1792 downwards. And by teatime the whole of North London, from the Manor House to High Barnet Church, from Hampstead Heath to Enfield Highway, was very white indeed. At a few minutes past four in the afternoon the triangular open common land, which is now the correct and asphalted park called Trinity Gardens, Wood Green, was deserted. Save where an open trench for pipes bisected it like a black knife-gash, all spotless lay the untrodden snow. In the Trinity Road Higher Grade Board School, which fronted this blanket of virginal purity, the Sixth, Seventh, and ex-Seventh Standards were receiving their weekly spoonful of English, after an exhausting week of French, German, Chemistry, Botany,...
